The geyser of Reykjavik

Creation 2007

Iceland

The French Institute of Archaeological Excavations brought about a geyser in the streets of Reykjavik (Iceland). In doing so, the researchers awoke a Giant who had been sleeping for hundreds of years under the city's main road.

This Giant immediately took it out on the vehicles in the city, crushing and tearing them to pieces whilst wildly stabbing them with oversized knife and fork.

The authorities sent for the Giant's daughter, named Little Girl-Giant, to reassure the public. She stayed in the city for two days to try to coax her father out. He appeared in a huge chariot pulled along the streets.

As they were approaching the port, the Little Girl-Giant cut off her father's head and threw it into the water.
